the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 13.5 million (19.5% of the population).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people, and the Government has set out a strategy for the 21st century in the White Paper on Ageing Better: Our Future (Department of Health 2000). This sets out a vision of a society in which older people are able to live well, and to contribute to their communities. The White Paper sets out a number of key objectives, including:

- to improve the health and well-being of older people;
- to ensure that older people are able to live independently and to participate in their communities;
- to ensure that older people are able to live in their own homes, wherever possible;
- to ensure that older people are able to access the services and support that they need.

The White Paper also sets out a number of key actions, including:

- to improve the health and well-being of older people by promoting healthy living and preventing illness and disability;
- to ensure that older people are able to live in their own homes, wherever possible, by providing them with the services and support that they need.
